Numb. 462.

THE Pennſylvania GAZETTE.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From October 13. to October 20. 1737.

To the Author of the Pennſylvania Gazette.

SIR,

AS I am a great Lover of all Works of Ingenuity, and the Authors of them, ſo more eſpecially am I a great Reader and Admirer of thoſe Labours of the Learned, called ALMANACKS.

As I am a conſiderable Proficient in this Sort of Learning; and as at this time of the Year, Copies of Almanacks for the next Year uſually come to the Preſs, long before they are wanted: And as I have laid out many a Six-pence among your Cuſtomers, the Profit whereof has in a great Meaſure redounded to you: So I may reaſonably hope to be look'd on as a good Cuſtomer, and claim a favourable Place in your Paper.

I have a large Volume in Manuſcript by me, on the Important Subject of Almanack-making, which I may in time communicate to the Publick; but at preſent I am willing to oblige them, with only a Taſte of my Skill, which (if I have any Title to the Art of Prognoſtication) will certainly make them long for the whole.

My preſent Deſign, is to give to you and the Publick, a ſhort Eſſay, upon the Talents requiſite in an Almanack-Writer, by which it will plainly appear, how much the Community is indebted to Men of ſuch great and uncommon Parts and Sagacity.

An Almanack-Writer, Sir, ſhould be born one like a Poet; for as I read among the Works of the learned, Poeta naſcitur non fit; ſo it is a Maxim with me, that Almanackorum ſcriptor naſcitur not fit. Gifts of Nature, Sir, compleated by Rules of Art, are indiſpenſably Neceſſary to make a great Man this way, as well as any other.

The firſt Thing requiſite in an Almanack-Writer, is, That he ſhould be deſcended of a great Family, and bear a Coat of Arms, this gives Luſtre and Authority to what a Man writes, and makes the common People to believe, that certainly this is a great Man. I have known Almanack-Writers ſo curious and exact in this particular, that they have been at the Expence and Charge of a Wooden Cut in the Frontiſpiece, with their Arms emblazon'd, and ſurrounded with a Label, expreſſing the Name of the Family. This, Sir, made a great Impreſſion, I confeſs, upon myſelf and others, and made thoſe Works to go off well.

If the Author who was born to be an Almanack-maker, has the Misfortune to be meanly deſcended, but yet, has a true Genius; if he has by him, or can borrow a Book, entitul'd the Peerage of England, he may ſafely borrow a Coat, (if there happens to be a Peer of his own Name) by reaſon, we are ſo great a Way diſtant from the Earl Marſhal of that Part of Great-Britain call'd England.

The next Talent requiſite in the forming of a compleat Almanack-Writer, is a Sort of Gravity, which keeps a due medium between Dulneſs and Nonſence, and yet has a Mixture of both. Now you know, Sir, that grave Men are taken by the common People always for wiſe Men. Gravity is juſt as good a Picture of Wiſdom, as Pertneſs is of Wit, and therefore very taking. And to compleat an Almanack-maker, in this particular, he ſhou'd write Sentences, and throw out Hints, that neither himſelf, nor any Body elſe can underſtand or know the Meaning of. And this is alſo a neceſſary Talent. I will give you ſome Inſtances of this Way of Writing, which are almoſt inimitable, ſuch as theſe, Leeds, Jan. 23. 1736. Beware, the Deſign is ſuſpected. Feb. 23. The World is bad with ſomebody. Mar. 27. Crimes not remitted. April 10. Cully Mully puff appears. May 21 The Sword of Satan is drawn. June 7. The Cat eat the Candle. Now, Sir, Why ſhould the Sword of Satan be drawn to kill the Cat on the 21ſt Day of May, when it plainly appears in Print, that the Cat did not eat the Candle till the 7th of June following? This Queſtion no Man but an Aſtrologer can poſſibly anſwer.

In the next Place, I lay it down as a certain Maxim or Poſition, that an Almanack-Writer ſhou'd not be a finiſh'd Poet, but a Piece of one, and qualify'd to write, what we vulgarly call Doggerei; and that his Poetry ſhou'd bear a near Reſemblance to his Proſe. I muſt beg Horace's and my Lord Roſcommon's Pardon, if I diſſent from them in this one particular. I will give you their Rule in my Lord's Engliſh Tranſlation, and ſave myſelf the Trouble of tranſcribing the Latin of Horace.

" But no Authority of Gods nor Men
" Allow of any Mean in Poeſy.

This might for all I know be a Rule for Poetry among the Ancients, but the Moderns have found it troubleſome, and the moſt of them, have wholly neglected it for that Reaſon. Witneſs the Authors Verſes, whoſe Praiſe I am now celebrating, December 1736.

Now is my 12 Months Task come to concluſion,
Lord free us from Hatred, Envy and Confuſion.
All are not pleas'd, nor never will i'th' main.
Fewds and Diſcords among us will remain.
Be that as 'twill, however I'm glad to ſee,
Envy diſappointed both at Land and Sea.

I do not pretend to ſay, that this is like the Poetry of Horace, or Lord Roſcommon, but it is the Poeſy of an Aſtrologer; it is his own and not borrowed; It is occult and myſterious. It has a due Degree of that Sort of Gravity, which I have mentioned: In ſhort, it is form'd upon the Rules which I have laid down in this ſhort Eſſay.

I could further prove to you, if I was to go about it, That an Almanack-Writer ought not only to be a Piece of a Wit, but a very Wag; and that he ſhou'd have the Art alſo to make People believe, that he is almoſt a Conjurer, &c. But theſe Things I reſerve for my greater Work, and in the mean time, until that appears, I deſire to remain,

Sir,

Sept. 27. 1737. Your very humble Servant,

PHILOMATH.

London,

LONDON, July 31.

Extract of a Letter from Ely, dated July 5.

On Friday laſt Mary Bird, condemn'd for the Murder of her Husband by Poiſon, was brought on a Sledge and burnt in the View of many Thouſands of Spectators, whoſe Curioſity inclin'd them to the Sight of an Execution ſo uncommon in this Country: And as there was ſomething extraordinary in the Woman, I have ſent you a particular Account of her as follows,

Her Behaviour while under Condemnation was ſomething remarkable; for her Paſſion for Day, her Gallant, was ſo ſtrong that (to uſe the Words of her own Confeſſion to ſome of her Relations) ſhe cou'd not hear the very rattling of his Irons without being all of a Fire, which Paſſion ſhe ſaid had frequently aſſaulted her when ſhe was engag'd in her deepeſt and moſt ſolemn Devotions.

The High Bailiff finding no likelyhood of her being brought to a true Senſe of the horrid Crime ſhe had been convicted of, till her Gallant (who frequently found Means to come at the Speech of her) was remov'd, gave Orders to the Goaler for his immediate Diſcharge out of Priſon, and ſtrictly forbid his ever being admitted to the Sight of her again.

After this ſhe ſeem'd to ſhew ſome Signs of real Penitence, and own'd not only the Fact itſelf, and the Juſtice of the Sentence which had been paſs'd on her; and alſo declar'd (which ſhe at firſt refus'd upon the Surgeon's Enquiry) that ſhe had given the Poiſon in warm Ale, and not in Haſty-Pudding, as commonly reported; but that ſhe gave him the firſt half Ounce, for which ſhe immediately felt the Pangs of Conſcience, and wiſh'd ſincerely that it might not have the expected Effect; that her Method of giving it was thus: ſhe firſt mix'd the Arſenick with brown Sugar, and then put it into Ale and gave it him to drink.

Some of her Friends tax'd her with having formerly murder'd two of her Baſtard Children; but ſhe declar'd to the laſt that that Accuſation was falſe, and that ſhe never had been guilty of even the Intention of Murder, except the Fact for which ſhe was to ſuffer.

It was remarkable that even when ſhe ſhew'd the moſt evident Signs of true Repentance, ſhe preſerved a ſtedfaſt Countenance, and waited her Diſſolution with a ſort of Impatience.

She was carried to the Stake in a Garment made of Sackcloth, cover'd with Pitch; and it was obſerv'd, that when ſhe was going to receive her Puniſhment, ſhe turn'd aſide her pitch'd Cap and caſt her Eyes among the Spectators; her Countenance was at that time chearful, and beſpoke a great deal of Reſignation and Intrepidity.

She ſpoke little at the Stake; all that ſhe had to ſay ſhe compriz'd briefly, and addreſs'd herſelf to the Spectators in the following manner; that ſhe deſerv'd the Puniſhment ſhe was going to ſuffer; that ſhe freely forgave all the Evidences againſt her; but that her Siſter had forſworn herſelf; and that ſhe hop'd all Women would take Warning at her ſhameful End.

Extract of a private Letter from on board of the Nevis Merchant, Capt. New, dated at Nevis, May, 1737.

On the 11th of March we ſail'd from Cork, and two Days after (which was Sunday) we had a very hard Gale of Wind all Day, and about Twelve at Night we were preparing to throw the Ship to, and juſt as the People had reef'd and bundled our Main Sail, a Clap of Thunder broke juſt to Leeward of us, knock'd down all our Men except one. Some had the Uſe of their Limbs taken from them for two or three Days, ſome for a Week. One Man was burnt from his Right Hand all down his Breaſt and Thighs and left Foot: He is recover'd of it, though at one time I was much afraid of his Life. Our Cook was ſtruck blind and continues ſo; and I believe he will never recover his Sight again. Another was ſtruck dead, ſo that he never gaſp'd after.

A Letter from Paris, June 22.

The King has granted Letter Patents of Privilege to the Sieur John Baptiſt Maffren, for the ſole Property for a Term of Years of a Machine he has invented to threſh Corn, which not only threſhes, but winnows and ſifts it at the ſame Time; and likewiſe makes the Straw ſofter and better for littering Horſes. This Machine he pretends will do more Work with the Service of only one Man, than can be perform'd by a Dozen of the ableſt Threſhers; and will be extremely uſeful, eſpecially for the Southern Provinces of France, where they tread their Corn at preſent by Oxen and Horſes, which may be employ'd in other Work.

By Advice from Muſcovy we hear, that the Gentlemen Virtuoſi's, who about a Year ſince were ſent by the Czarina with a proper Guard to Siberia, in order to diſcover a North-East Paſſage to China, have ſent Letters to their Friends, ſignifying that they have made many uſeful Diſcoveries in their Journey; but that they have at leaſt another Year's Work before they can accompliſh their intended Task.

London, July 26. By Letters from Newfoundland, we are informed, that a Light-Houſe has been lately erected on Sim's Iſland, at the Entrance Inwards of the Harbour of Fogo. It is of a ſufficient Heighth, and a Fire will be conſtantly kept in it, 'till every Ship is gone at the Fall of the Year. It ſeems the Mouth of that Harbour is very narrow, and the Wind exceedingly variable in the Night, ſo that it is judg'd to be of great Service to all who Trade to that Part of the Country.

We hear, that the Magiſtracy of Edinburgh have diſcharged Mr. Lyndſ, from being one of the Captains of their Town Guard.

And that they have agreed to pay the Window of the late Capt. John Porteous 50 l. per Annum Sterling during her natural Life.

Some time next Week the Ambaſſador from the Emperor of Morocco, is to have an Audience of his Majeſty at Hampton Court. We are informed he is impowered to make ſome advantageous Offers concerning Trade.

By the Death of the Great Duke of Tuſcany, his moſt Chriſtian Majeſty ſaves four Millions five Hundred Thouſand Livres which he was to pay annually to the Duke of Lorrain.

The French are repairing the Fortifications of Metz with great Diligence, and enlarging and beautifying the Streets, King Staniſlaus being expected to pay them a Viſit in a few Days.

Laſt Week a curious fine Monument, done by Mr. Ryſbrach of Oxford Road, was ſet up in the Church at Kedleſton near Derby to the Memory of the late Sir Nathaniel Curzon, Bart. and his Lady, on which is the following Inſcription,

This Monument was erected in Honour of the Memory of Sir Nathaniel Curzon, Bart. and Dame
Sarah Curzon his Wife,
Daughter of William Penn, Eſq; of Buckinghamſhire, whoſe Remains lies in this Church;
Their Hearts were united, by the ſtrongeſt Ties of Friendſhip,
And eminently diſtinguiſhed in Piety towards God, and
Charity to Mankind;
Their Death all virtuous Minds lament,
In whom while living, we beheld Minds truly Great and Chriſtian;
The Orphan loſt a Support, the Poor their Relief, the Rich their Comfort;
This Place its greateſt Ornament, Religion her brighteſt Example.
The Memory ſhall never be forgotten, nor our Affections
languiſh for ſo ſincere Friends,
Who were both univerſally Charitable, Generous and Beneficent
To all Mankind, and juſtly merrited the higheſt Eſteem,
The beſt and moſt affectionate of Parents;
They had five Sons and four Daughters;
They reſign'd their Souls into the moſt merciful Hands of Almighty God,
In full Truſt and Confidence of the All-ſufficient Merits
of our Bleſſed Saviour and Redeemer Jeſus Chriſt, Sir Nathaniel Curzon, Bart. on the fourth Day of March 1718, 19.
Dame Sarah Curzon, his Wife, on the fourth Day of January 1727, 8.
This Monument was put up with a grateful Memory
by their youngeſt Daughter,
In the Year of our Lord 1737.

Last Tuesday and Wednesday his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the Lord Bishop of Bristol, confirmed above 4000 Persons at Maidstone in Kent; on which Occasion great Multitudes of Persons of both Sexes, came from all Quarters of that County; they were so numerous, that they broke down several of the Rails at the Altar, in order to get near to his Grace.

Letters at Petersburg from Velt Marshal Munich of the 8th Instant advise, that he was then arrived on the Banks of the River Bog; that a Body of Tartars appearing on the other side, Count Munich sent a Detachment to chase them, which had no sooner passed the River than the Tartars retired. Two Days ago a Courier arrived there with Letters from Velt Marshal Lacy dated the 11th Instant, by which the Court is informed, that he was not above 40 or 50 Wersts from the Precop, and that the Flotilla was near him (having coasted from Asoph the North Shore of the Palus Meotis) and anchored every Night within sight of his Camp; that as yet they have seen no Turkish Ships or Vessels in those Seas; and it is thought Velt Marshal Lacy will transport part of his Army in his Boats over the Gulf-Moore into the Crimea.

Letters are arrived at Vienna from M. Seckendorff, in which he advises, that he was arrived at Colar, a Place about four Days March from Semendria towards Jagodin, with the Infantry under his Command; and that Marshal Philipi conducts the Cavalry through the Mountainous Roads towards Jagodin. It is supposed they are by this time upon the Turkish Territories. Prince Hildburghausen advances likewise towards Bosnia, but in such a manner, as to be as near to the great Army as possible. These Advices add, that Nissa will be invested about the 20th Instant at farthest. Count Wallis will, as is supposed, enter into Wallachia with the greatest Part of the Body he commands at the same Place; and People flatter themselves that he, at least, will find very little Opposition. If the Siege of Nissa is finished soon enough to allow the undertaking that of Widdin this Campaign, the three Corps will join together for that Purpose. All the Dispositions of the Turks are said to be very weak. There will be a solemn Procession on Sunday to the Cathedral Church, at which the Emperor and the whole Court will assist, to ask God Almighty's Blessing and Assistance, which is the usual way of beginning War against the Turks, and a Manifesto will be distributed the Day before: It is already printed in Latin and German, and is now printing in French and Italian.
